Pranesha Bunsee

Pranesha has been working in the technology industry for 22 years. She started off as a junior programmer and evolved to team lead/architect. Her project roles were back-end development on enterprise-wide systems working with proprietary software. She worked mostly in the financial sector with some projects in the healthcare sector.

In 2015, She decided to learn more about front-end development and open source. So she did the web development bootcamp at NYCDA. Since then she has been employed as a full stack developer at Camerican International.
